

Round 1 – Europe Feels Less Secure

Tensions are rising along the borders of the European Union.

Many people are beginning to wonder whether Europe can ensure its own security.

Options:

- A. Countries act separately
- B. Greater cooperation between countries
- C. A common EU army

Discussion Questions:

- Why do you choose this option?
- What are its advantages?
- What are the risks?

Round 2 – The Cost of Security

Experts report that creating a common EU army would be very costly and would take many years.

Options:

- A. Security is the top priority — it is worth investing in
- B. Yes, but only if pensions, healthcare, and social services are not affected
- C. Each country should decide on its own spending

Discussion Questions:

- Who could benefit from this decision?
- Who might be concerned about it?
- How will it affect citizens' everyday lives?

Round 3 – Who Decides?

Countries cannot agree on who should command the common army.

Options:

- A. Each country retains control over its military
- B. Joint decisions, but with national oversight
- C. One common EU command

Discussion Questions:

- What is the biggest problem here?
- What would be fair?
- How can chaos be avoided?

Round 4 – Citizens’ Concerns

Some citizens fear losing independence and taking on new obligations.

Options:

- A. A common army for defense only
- B. Only with the consent of all member states
- C. Gradual cooperation instead of a single army

Discussion Questions:

- What causes the greatest concern?
- What needs to be clearly explained to citizens?
- What conditions are necessary?

Round 5 – Final Decision

The European Union must make a decision.
